PATHWAY TO GLOBAL CITIZENSHIP

As a school committed to educating for global citizenship, how do you evaluate the impact of your staff and programmes and ensure students are world-ready global citizens?

A school environment that is conducive to intercultural learning is essential to developing understandings of education for global citizenship. But global citizenship won't evolve organically in your school. The growth of your environment needs to be part of a strategic process.

We support our members in the development and implementation of high-quality international education programmes. Our services will help your school explore the deeper aspects of global citizenship, with a focus on intercultural learning.

[We] developed an understanding of various vocabulary and theories about global citizenship and intercultural competence. This enables us to have conversations with shared and agreed upon language.

We understand the challenges that schools face when they explore the deeper aspects of global citizenship. We have worked with diverse school communities in more than 100 countries by helping them evaluate all aspects of educational strategy and discover new ways to live their mission more purposefully. Our process engages your educators, leaders, students and the larger community in intentional work that leads to practical development and intercultural learning.

How will CIS support your school community?

- Evaluate your mission and strategy for school development
- Explore the impact of your staff and programmes to ensure students are world-ready
- Enhance your school communities understanding and practice of educating for global citizenship
- Share practices to develop your school environment to be conducive to intercultural learning
- Provide external validation of educational programmes and outcomes

Use CIS services to build your own pathway to develop global citizens in your school community!
